Library Debuts Plans for Proposed Expansion

More books and media. More computers. More room for children's services. A meeting room for library and community programs. Quiet study space. Better seating. More staff work and storage space.

All these were service goals the Library Commission hoped to address in plans for an expanded building, and architect Danny Shelley has developed a schematic design that includes everything! The Library Commission also had two other parameters for the plan: the addition should have the same traditional feel as the current building, and the traffic flow on our site with entrances and exits on both Washington and Garden Streets should be maintained. Even with our challenging sloped site, Mr. Shelley managed to meet those criteria as well.

DIRECTOR'S DESK

SARAH MCMASTER

It's hard to believe, but the Fairfield County Library and I have spent the last 30 years together!

The library building which was brand new and fresh when I started to work in May, 1977, is showing its age and crowded condition...just like me with my gray hair and no-longer-young body. But we have been a good partnership as we have grown older together. I have matured, and so, I hope, have the services and programs the library is able to offer the community.

And, God willing, there is plenty of life left in both of us...the library and me...to be able to continue to serve Fairfield County. These are exciting times at the library: thinking about the proposed expansion of the Main Library gives us a new lease on life by opening up worlds of possibilities for new programs and services for our patrons. Looking at the plans and visualizing people browsing in the expanded reading area, using all the new computers, or enjoying a program in the new meeting room or children's story time area gives me goosebumps.

A lot of folks worked hard to build this building 30 years ago and gave the community a great gift by doing so. I'm looking forward to working with equally dedicated folks today as we try to make our expansion plans a reality for the future of Fairfield County.

A special thank-you cheer goes out to Representative Creighton Coleman who, along with 63 other House members, approved a $.25 per capita increase in State Aid to Public Libraries. If this vote is sustained by the Senate, the Fairfield County Library will realize an extra $10,000 in state funding for 2007-2008.

The proposed 16,000 square foot addition will be attached to the northwest end of the current building in a "split-level" configuration. Patrons will enter on the first level which will contain the circulation desk, audio-visual materials, a children's area including computers, a young adult area, and a meeting room with seating for 70-90 people. The current library building is a half-level up from the entrance level and will become the adult browsing area with new books, magazines, newspapers, adult fiction, and some study rooms. The third level is the second floor of the new addition and will contain public access computers, reference, a South Carolina history room, and adult non-fiction.

The estimated cost for the project is 4.5 to 5 million dollars. No construction funds are on hand at this point, but the Library Commission and staff are working with County Council to identify resources and secure funding for the project.

Copies of the plan are on display in the front office of the library. Stop by to see them anytime! To schedule a presentation for a club or group about the library plans, please call Sarah McMaster at the library.
